Pittsburgh, 20th June, 1818.

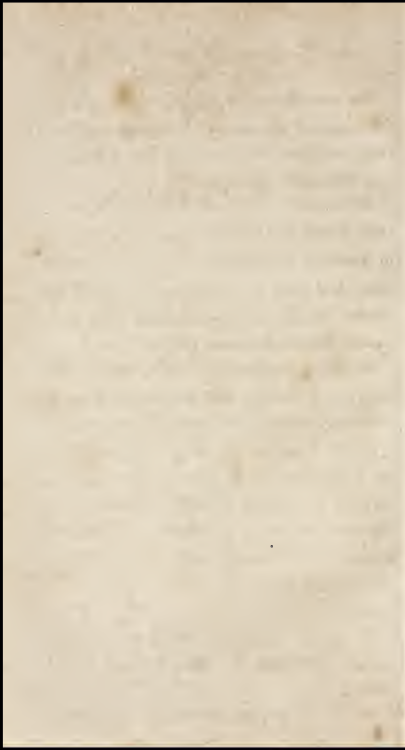

WE now offer to our friends and the public, a Catalogue of our stock of Books, comprising a larger collection than has been ever offered for sale West of the mountains.

Arrangements which we have made in the Atlantic Cities, will enable us to furnish any Books of American publication with the least possible delay, and twice a year our orders will be forwarded to Europe for such works as have not passed through American Editions.

Works of considerable cost as well as many others of a scientific and professional class are frequently permitted to remain for some time out of print; from this and other causes, it will often happen that many books in this Catalogue may not be replaced immediately, but it is our intention as far as practicable, to support a constant and extensive assortment of the valuable standard works, as well as of all new productions.

To public institutions, and Gentlemen purchasing Libraries, a liberal discount will be made.

The BRITISH ENCYCLOPEDIA is a DICTIONARY of ARTS and SCIENCES, comprising an accurate and popular view of the present improved state of human knowledge, by William Nicholson, illustrated with upwards of 160 elegant engravings.

“From the great Encyclopedias, each of which may be said to constitute an entire Library, to those smaller compositions intended for mere reference:—from the hurried compilations of book-makers to those elaborate and luminous works in which men of the highest reputation have recorded their comprehensive views, and their most striking discoveries, it is not difficult to observe and deduce the distinct and separate abilities of each, and the duties to be expected from the editors and proprietors of such undertakings. Among the most obvious of these it is indispensable that a new work should be called for, by circumstances which point out advantages of size, plan and materials not before adopted, and that the means to be employed, in the actual performance, should be such as must determine its worth and authority with every description of readers.”—Extract from the preface.

COUNTING HOUSE ASSISTANT.

In press and will be published on the 1st of July,

THE

COUNTING HOUSE ASSISTANT,

A SYSTEM OF AMERICAN

MERCANTILE LAW;

BY JAMES C. GILLELAND, ESQ.

The arrangement will be as follows.

CHAP. I. Contracts in General.

II. Bills of Exchange.

III. Law of Carriers.

IV. Insolvencies.

IT appears from the many strong complaints among men of the different trading classes, about the difficulty of acquiring any tolerable knowledge of the law relative to contracts, commerce, &c. and the losses daily sustained by lawsuits; by claims abandoned; by liability not comprehended; and by the numerous train of evils consequent upon that unavoidable ignorance, that a work of the kind we propose, is becoming indispensable among all men of business. It is indeed evident, that the most important knowledge a man can possess, in any profession, is a knowledge of the law, by which his conduct in it should be regulated. But from the number of works, to which a man must at present resort, to obtain the necessary information; and from the many new views that have been entertained; particularly from the late decisions of the courts in this country, arising from the developement of new principles; the knowledge of mercantile law, is almost exclusively confined to those who belong to the profession of the law.

The above described work, besides containing a brief and complete statement of all the legal principles which its subject involves, will have each item marked with references to the authorities; thus furnishing a clue for the fullest examination of every point.

The true nature and design of the work now presented to the public, cannot perhaps be better expressed than in the words of our Author, at the commencement of his Address to the Students of Divinity, prefixed to the volume itself—"For my assistance in instructing you, this Compendious View of Natural and Revealed Religion was formed. To gratify a number of you, it is now published." It is intended, "not to make you read, but to make you THINK MUCH," and to render you mighty in the Scriptures, readily able to support the several articles of our holy religion by the self-evidencing and conscience-commanding testimony of the HOLY GHOST. To manifest the extensive connection of divine truths, some leading articles relative to the perfections of God, the person of Christ, &c. are traced through many others ; yet "few local or dormant controversies have been brought on the field ; nor have the enemies of the truth been unfairly represented or indiscreetly answered."
